Hi Christopher-

I cannot confirm that ActiveMQ is packaged to align with Java modules. =
The broker does depend on classes in the client jar, so if you depend on = the broker, it will drag the client classes.

Since ActiveMQ has been prevalent for so long, moving packages to proper = separation will need to wait until the next major release =E2=80=94 7.x.

Tip=E2=80=94 the OSGi module is a single jar with everything packaged, = you may look to try that dependency, or rolling your own shaded jar with = everything you need in one place.

Thanks,
Matt Pavlovich

not be together and be implemented differently on our end?

Hello all,

We are in the process of upgrading our application from Java 8 to 17 using = ActiveMQ Classic version 6.1.2. I am learning about the modules as I go so= I apologize if this much easier than it seems.

While setting up our module-info, in it we require the activemq.broker and = activemq.client. However it seems this is not allowed as both of those modu= les export the same packages names to the same modules which causes it to e= rror. Is the expectation that the client and broker should not be together = and be implemented differently on our end?
